GET SET FAIR AND SQUARE ASSESSMENT.

We are almost there, the gun is about to go off, and the clock would start ticking away. This is the time for the final stock taking as we embark on this journey, to allow for the very last minute adjustments.

First , let's take stock of our learning on this subject so far. Secondly, we should do what I call a 'gap analysis' with our own lives and finally, make last minute adjustments as required.

‘GAP ANALYSIS’ OF OUR OWN LIVES

Life and living needs to be purposeful with a defined destination and sufficient clarity to create and sustain a meaningful lifetime of passion and pursuit.

It's not enough to define a lofty destination, it must be visible and published to rally the required provisions for the task ahead.

No one buys into the vision of a confused and or an ignorant man/ woman. Not only must the defined destination be inspiring, the point man must be confident in his ability and preparedness to undertake a successful journey.

The journey towards the destination is never smooth and requires effort and resilience to stay on course.

You do not arrive at your destination overnight, there are stages to go through.

There are laws for successful participation. Compliance brings success and violation leads to failures.

Do I have what it takes to win this particular race? Am I well prepared to win the various races that make up my life's journey?

Many people today believe in putting up a facade and not revealing their underbelly. While this may be a good strategy in a few cases, too many people take it too far to the extent that they cannot undertake a fair and square self assessment at any time. The most important step of getting set for this journey, is a determination to answer some self- review questions as honestly as possible.

The answer is unlikely to be a straight forward Yes or No, if you are being completely honest. No one plans to fail, the problem is failing to plan invariably results in planning to fail. On the other hand, even where an extensive planning and preparation has been carried out, dotting the 'i's and crossing the 't's makes a huge difference in success. Where ever one finds oneself now, there is usually some adjustment required just before you set off.

There are only two outcomes :
An affirmation that you are so well prepared, with the right tools /support in place and only slight adjustments(which has now been made) are required. Even where the adjustments can no longer be made at this point in time, it is unlikely to hamper victory. What is required is not a perfect preparation but an adequate preparation .

The second outcome is , significant things are out of place and a lot more preparation is required. Even where this race cannot be postponed and or shelved, lessons have been learnt and a determination is now being made to correct the errors / lack of preparation of the past. It's not the end of the journey , there are many stages to the journey and one can always start again. It's pardonable to lose some battles as long as the war is won!! Remember, it's not over until it is over.
